October Program Meeting

Wednesday, October 18 | 11:15am - 1:00pm |

CAP Tulsa - Conference Center

Professional Ethics: A Preventive Maintenance Approach Presented by Christopher Bauer

This session will provide HR professionals with immediately applicable ideas and tools to recognize, often costly but often unseen or ignored risks, for professional ethics difficulties in themselves as well as their colleagues, co-workers, and organizations. The emphasis will be on helping attendees learn how to develop and implement strategies to prevent ethics problems before they occur rather than – as is more typically done in most organizations – paying the steep price for catching problems after they have already occurred.

This session qualifies for the HRCI ethics requirement.

What is DisruptHR?

DisruptHR is an information exchange designed to energize, inform, and empower people in the HR (and HR adjacent) world.

Once in a while an event series is born that shakes things up, it makes you think differently, it leaves you inspired. That event is DisruptHR.

12 speakers, 5 minutes each, and slides rotate every 15 seconds. They have one goal...teach us something, but make it quick (and funny helps).

If you're an HR professional, a CEO, a technologist, a community leader – and you've got something to say (or learn) about talent, culture, or technology – Disrupt is the place.

DisruptHR is next week. Don't miss it!

Meeting Culture Matters: Strengthen Your Workplace

Relationships with Inclusive Meetings

Presented by Linda Jenkins, Owner, Jenkins Consulting Group

Many organizations use meetings as a mechanism for facilitating communication and interactions between employees, volunteers, and customers. Inclusive meetings relate to all three dimensions of diversity – internal, external, and organizational – this presentation will emphasize ways inclusive meetings reduce bias and increase psychological safety by affecting multiple dimensions of diversity.
